

SATURDAY, MAY 15, 2010

Mission Tuesday #62

I was at Mission of Hope three days this week, and I'm glad I was. It's just so cool to me to see how God is involved in the big things of our lives, AND in the little things...especially at Mission of Hope!

A small, but big thing happened on Thursday. One of the volunteers asked me that morning what we should do with all the ice cream cones we had in the back pantry, which have been there for awhile. Asking Phyllis, she answered, "I'm waiting on the ice cream." Half-heartedly I replied to her answer, "I'll pray for ice cream then." I have to admit I didn't stop right then and pray, but I sure thought that it would be great for someone to bring in some ice cream, especially since we hadn't had it for so long. I didn't give it another thought, and got busy doing something else.

Phyllis and I went to a short meeting at 2pm, and something very amazing happened while we were gone. Someone had brought in three and a half pans of lasagna (we were planning on making a lasagna casserole for lunch for Friday), two pans of tossed lettuce salad, salad dressing, and garlic bread...all which we could use in our meal on Friday. And, the most amazing part...they also brought in two ice cream buckets of ice cream! And this was no ordinary ice cream...it was my favorite ice cream! I couldn't believe it! God provided the ice cream after we had just talked about it earlier that morning! We hadn't even thought about ice cream for months, and on the day we do, God provides it for us!!! How awesome is that??! God not only provided the ice cream, but the food that would help us with the meal for Friday...in His perfect timing!

Some people might say that was just coincidence, and some people might say that "just positive thinking." I know better. God is certainly there at Mission of Hope...in the big things AND in the little! Great is His faithfulness!